Bulwer-Lytton's life revenue from his novels was $800,000, and the most successful of them all did not yield anything like 25 cents a word; Wilkle Collin's highest rate of pay was a little over 12 cents a word, and Anthony Trollope, though he drew $15,000 or more for each of half a dozen novels, touched his highwater mark at the same relatively modest figure. Scott received $90,000 for his "Life of Bonaparte;" Lord Beaconsfield, $69,000 for "Endymion;" Macaulay's "History of England" brought him $100,000 in a check, and Froude was $50,000 better off for writing "Oceana."

Goldsmith's "Vicar of Wakefield" brought him just $300; his English grammar, $25, and his "Traveler" $105, Johnson sold his "Lives of the Poets" at the rate of seven words for 2 cents; "Paradise Lost" and "Hamlet" fetched mortal lines at a little over a halfever put into his pocket was $200.-Philadelphia Press.

Supreme Court to Say Whether a County Is Liable to Prosecution.

Whether countles are immune from liability for damages on account of injuries to person or property, through the negligence of the county authorities, officials or servants, is a ques-

Judge Parsons at Hilo held in a case now appealed that the county in liam Allen. Herman Bechert, Edward this Territory is a sovereign and can not be prosecuted without its consent. The case is that of Kumazo, a Japanese storekeeper, against the County of Hawaii. He takes exceptions to the Fourth Circuit Court on the ruling just mentioned, and his appeal is argued in a brief filed by his attorneys, Carl S. Smith and A. F. Judd.

Plaintiff, it is related, was the owner of a general merchandise store at Onomea. Defendant's employe, while working on a road under the direction of the supervisors of the county, diverted the course of a large stream of water so as to destroy the plaintiff's store, stock of merchandise and home, inflicting damage in the sum of $10,-

To the plaintiff's declaration the defendant interposed a demurrer which the court sustained and judgment was rendered accordingly.

One question only is presented, Kumazo's attorneys say-"Is the County of Hawaii liable to the plaintiff upon the facts stated in his declaration?" Defendant's theory and that adopted by the court is thus stated:

"The county is a subdivision of the State or Territory, established for the administration of public affairs of State only, and so shares the immunity from actions at law which the State enjoys by reason of its sovereign character."

"1. The rule which has found fre quent application elsewhere is based upon the fundamental character of county government in its relation to the State and has no application in Hawaii because of the fundamentally different character of our local institutions, which difference requires the abandonment of the rule.

"2. Granting all that can be said favorable to the sovereign immunity rule, the reasoning upon which it rests (in a great majority of cases at least) is artificial and violative of the fundamental rights of property; and in all cases in recent years where courts have found the opportunity to avoid the rule a recovery has been allowed against the county."

Plaintiff's attorneys say that the fact that our Legislature used the word "county" in describing subdivisions of the Territory does not of itself invest those subdivisions with sovereign attributes, nor does the christening process make the local organism of Hawaii bear even the most remote similarity to the counties of Massachusetts, Virginia or Kansas. A moment's consideration, it is said, will indicate the reason why our counties differ so materially from those on the mainland. It is common knowledge that the County Act was very vigorously contested on the ground that word articles. Barrie's "Little Minis- conditions in Hawali are so radically different from those on the mainland that public affairs could be better managed without local political organization; and in the passage of the County Act practically all of the public matters which are classed as sovereign powers of the Territory were withheld from the countles for the frankly avowed reason that, with the large percentage of electors untutored in the practise of democratic government, it would be unsafe to entrust to the counties the exercise of so im-

The brief proceeds to show "exactly what difference warrants the courts in holding that a municipal corporawork entitled "An Introduction to the 'easily conceded to be the most meritorlous volume in the Johns Hopkins University studies in historical and political science." It is pointed out that the town and the shire came from England. These institutions took new forms as remost important public functions were $25 apiece; Dryden wrote 10,000 im- ginia and Carolina the town amounted to nothing and the county performed penny a word, and all Gray's muse all of the public duties. Pennsylvania was a compromise between those two sections. There is a lot of discussion on this line and many authorities are quoted. Altogether it is an interesting case. not the least from the fact that a they set him leading the horses that Japanese in this American Territory. towed the boat.
